LONDON, April 19 .- The correspondent at St. Petersburg of The Chronicle telegraphed that the Gov-

Brandt, is about to make a confession, is told.

"There is not a word of truth in the story," said John F. McIntyre wearily to-day, "Mrs. Meyer has not confessed or indicated any intention or desire to do so. We shall try Dr. Meyer on practically the same testimony as that offered in the first trial."

As for the Meyers, the doctor has never but once before intimated that the woman in the Tombs was his wife, the term being used by him in yesterday's talk about the assault made upon her by a drunken woman prisoner at the Tombs rather as the title given to her by the newspapers.

Once the doctor, in an interview with an "Evening World" reporter, spoke of the blue-eyed, silent woman as his wife, but the very next time the reporter visited him he denied that she was his wife, and denied that he had ever admitted it. It was then that he had ever admitted it. It was then that he had called his fellow-prisoner "wife" in a spirit of chivair.

avenue, was fined $10 by Justice Burke at the Yorkville Police Court to-day. Welsh said he was a medical student at Believue Hospital, and that he drank considerably yesterday.

While he was following a number of women on Lexington venue one of them screamed, which brought Charles D. Herman, of 423 Fourth avenue, to her aid. When he remonstrated with Welsh, the latter squared off and punched Herman on the nose. Herman them caused the arrest of the puglifistic student, who was locked up for the night in the East Thirty-fifth street police station.

Welsh said he had no idea of insulting anyone, and simply protected himself from Herman's attack. He pad the fine.

work it was found that many of the men were Italians, some unable to speak the English language. Some of these Italians had tickets bearing names of men of undoubted Irish ancestry. Others were thoroughly New England cognomens, and still others passed under names indicating that they had been born in England, Scotland, France, Ger-many and, in fact, every country save Italy.

"The Evening World" has been investigating that end of the story. The reporters found it an easy matter to establish the fact that positions were actually purchased by italians; that they were put to work upon the park improvements, while at the same time thousands of unemployed citizens were turned away.

Purchase of Work Cards.

Gluseppe Bevilacqua and Ferdinando latorelli are two of the men who bought tickets to work in Central Park. They live at his work in Central Park. They live at his wountry for years and speaks English fluently. Latorelli does not understand a word of our language. The men are both prosperous looking and intelligent.

According to their story, they wanted to fo to work in the park and were sent to Francesco Salino, a young tailor living at 3 Sullivan street, to purchase tickets. Salino did not have any tickets on hand, but he was able to get them. He also procured a ticket for another man called Gennaro, who is still at work under an Irish name in Central Park.

One of these tickets cost the buyers $25, and the other two were bought for $20 each. There was a partial payment for the tickets only when they were bought, the rest of the money being promised in a few weeks.

The real vendor of the tickets was not Salino, but Gluseppe Satiriale, of 48 Canal street, a fruit dealer, who hopes to have Salino some day for a son-inlaw, Satiriale has lived in this city for years. He was formerly employed in the Street-Cleaning Department. He was able to save enough to establish a fruit-stand and to maintain his family in comfortable circumstances.

Beytlacqua made his bargain for a ticket with Salino, When they had obtained the tickets Salino directed the men to take them to the Arsenal in Central Park. There they saw they had obtained the tickets Salino di-rected the mon to take them to the Arsenal in Central Park. There they saw a man who took the tickets from them and gave each one a slip of paper ad-dressed to John McChristie, the foreman of a gang, which was working in the park at One Hundred and Tenth street, near Columbus avenue.

Employed as William Murray. Beylacqua says that McChristie took up these slips, and having done so, for the men to come around on Monday for work. They saw McChristie on Saturday. March 17. Hevilacqua's ticket was made out in the name of William Murnay, of 60 Oliver street. When he bargained with Satirials he expected to be emisloyed as a gardener or assistant emission when the first of the surposes that were in store for him.

He said that Bevilacqua and Latorelli were peasants from his own home of Torre di Nocello, in the Province of Aveline, in Italy. They wanted tickets to work in the park, and applied to him and to Salino for them. Salino undertick to not the tickets and satisfale lent him $40 to do so. He heard Salino say that he sor the tickets from two men whom he found in a sation opposite the new Court-House, in Centre street.

Salino then offered them to Bevilacqua and Latorelli for $30 each, but he finally solt the two for $40.

According to Saltriale, the men came to him a few days latter and complained that tickets just as good as the ones they had paid him $40 for could be obtained from the Police Justices for nothing He told them that the tickets and his story of the model of the place know such a man.

Does He Live by the Traffic?

Bevilinequa and Salino make other charges of a scretous nature against Satirale. They allore that he does a targe traffic in tickets for work under different departments of the city government, and that he really makes a living by the sale of them.

They say that the old man worked in the Street-Chearing Department for many years, and that having acquired enough money while there to establish a fruit hushess and live comfortably, he sold his own place in the Department of the Counselor F.—. Chairman of the Quarter Sessions for Dublin, was so remarkable for his leniency to female culprits that a woman was seldom will, however, investigate fully.

A Literary Triumph.

book yet? Scribbler-No; to tell you the tr old boy, I begin to think that book is work of genius.

"Anybody praised it?"

"No, but forty-five publishers in refused it."

in a Co-Educational Institution "It's too bad those two so married and left college. They'e on half educated."

'Oh, no. Two halves make a shell they'll do."
